WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT HAS FINE EXHIBITS

FLORAL HALL IS FILLED WITH DISPLAYS OF FANCY AND ART WORKS AND COOKING.

BIG TASK FOR JUDGES

Competition for All Prizes is Keen Calling for Discriminating Judgment—Greenhouse Products Shown.

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)
"Women's department" is the verdict of the judges. The display of fancy-work shown in Floral Hall. The exhibit is presided over by Mrs. Rutter, assisted by Mrs. Harry Jones and Mrs. Oscar Yahn. A very busy trio they were on yesterday, trying to find room for all the daily and exquisite specimens of needlecraft which had been brought in to them. Point lace, darned, net, cross stitch, embroidery and intricate patterns in fillet crochet and in tatting were only some of the many varieties of handiwork exhibited.

Mrs. Frank Fisher is judge of this department and began her duties on Tuesday. That the office is no easy task may be seen from the numerous entries made in many of the classes. Over 100 entries were received in the class of tatting, were not only crocheted or knitted in the different kinds of decorative work were counted. Among the most valuable prizes, all of the most exquisite workmanship, it must be very difficult to choose the first and best. The pillows with knitted bed spreads for attention and wonderful linen cloths, sets of table doilies and finely embroidered pillow cases, all the household necessities are also numerous and well made, as well as the different styles of rugs either braided or hand woven.

The art department, presided over by Miss Sylvia Cannon is also filled with over 100 entries. A very large and fine collection of water colors, blue, green, brown, pen and ink drawings, crayon work is also represented and several beautiful sets of colored place cards were exhibited. Pyrography work has a very large showing as has also the new art of basketry. There is an immense display of hand painted china of really new and varied designs. In this class the exhibit is even larger than that of last year.

A unique and valuable addition to the articles in this department this season is the very large amount of antique working apparatus and curios shown. There are handwoven counterpanes, samplers, embroidered collars, candleholders as well as delicate little bits of baby clothing made with most painstaking care. A pumpkin hood and many dresses of the time of the early sixties are also presented for inspection. Hair wreaths and tiaras made of feathers and waxed are shown to illustrate the art of bygone days. While the spoons, old pewter and collections of antique coins are there for those interested in that line, Miss Cannon is assisted by her duties by her mother, Mrs. G. D. Cannon, and the judge in this department, Miss Charlotte Pritchard has been very busy with her work all day.

The "sweetest" part of the building is that devoted to the culinary department presided over by Mrs. Jerry, assisted by Miss Delon. Here delicious jellies and jams with jars of pickles and preserves for attention. The most tempting of frosted cakes are flanked by sea biscuits and loaves of bread like mother used to make, while the vast array of cookies, doughnuts and every kind of goodies that the masculine sex appreciate, as well as a most tempting display of home-made candies is shown. Only ten articles in any one class are allowed to one exhibitor. Mrs. C. McDonald is the judge in this department, and was very much engrossed in serving out the blue and red ribbons today.

This display in the floral department is of course small, owing to the very unfavorable season, but there are some interesting plants as well as a fairly good display of cut flowers among the amateur classes. Potted plants of ferns, palms and begonias from the greenhouses are shown in the professional display, as well as a really beautiful display of designs from the Janesville Floral company and Charles Rathjen. Walter Fitch is in charge of this department and John Pritchett is doing the work of judging, finishing his duties this forenoon.

Mother Love

Mother Love is one of the most sacred things in the world. It prompts the mother to give her strength and life even—gladly, happily—that her child may be safer, happier, stronger or better in every way.

Just a food—especially prepared to aid in making red blood and strong healthy tissue—is what she needs. Then all the natural functions of the body will be easily carried on without the least sense of fatigue or drain. With plenty of red blood in her veins, mother will feel no ill effect from nursing baby.

Her baby will aid mother in supplying baby with a quantity of good quality milk and at the same time improve her general physical condition. When it is impossible to nurse the baby, secure the food most nearly like mother's milk by asking your druggist for Thompson's Food (Peptonized).

We suggest that you try a 50c package with our guarantee of satisfaction.

SHOW FARMERS VALUE OF BLOODED CATTLE

Boscobel Fair Has Interesting Exhibit to Further Better Cattle Stock in State.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Boscobel, Wis., Aug. 9.—One of the interesting exhibits at the county fair which opened here yesterday, was the display of the Wisconsin Livestock Association showing farmers the value of raising blooded stock. The display is arranged on the same psychological truth which prompts a temperance lecturer in illustrating the evil effects of excess on drink to call some old soak on the platform as a "horrible example." The exhibit contains beef and dairy cattle of breeding which have every thing from fat "quarters" to broad backs and other physical attributes appealing to their owners.
And in the next stall are found cattle with spindle legs, cutter backs and shanks. Then there are hogs with any kind of breeding which are of the species known as "razor back" and about all they are good for is to run in contrast to the pedigreed animal, so far that little daylight is apparent between them.
This display hits the farmers right in the eye. The exhibition will be shown at various county fairs in the state and the big fair in Milwaukee in September.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Answered by Alfred W. McCann.
Q.—Is it known positively and beyond question that constipation is due to some large measure to a diet cause? If so, what should the diet consist in order to avoid constipation?
A.—I have repeatedly explained the causes of habitual constipation and its remedy by tracing it with great positiveness to the refined and impoverished foods of modern times. So many authorities are on record concerning the facts that they should need no emphasis from me.
Dr. J. M. Bell, writing in the Missouri State Medical Association Journal, declares:
"The keynote of the diet for habitual constipation is the selection of foodstuffs containing a large amount of cellulose—wood fibre, which does not digest but reaches the colon as cellulose—and those foodstuffs which leave distinct bulk of residue so as to gently stimulate weakened muscles, and blunted nerve reflexes.
Complete digestion, leaving little or no residue, such as polished rice, mashed potatoes, white bread, cake, biscuits, pastries, cream of wheat, corn flakes, farina, topioca, and tender meats, must be used very sparingly."
"Cabbage, raw or cut fine in the shape of cold slaw, may be used because its cellulose content furnishes peristaltic stimulation."
"Bran in some form is to be used every day either dry or with cream muffs, or breakfast food or made into bread."
"Pumpkinseed (made of whole rye) may be substituted instead of bran, preferably a day or two old. All these foods must be well masticated."
"To combat the tendency of an egg may be added with fruit such as figs, dates, raisins, etc."
"The midday meal should be made up of vegetables, nutritious yet containing as much cellulose as possible, such as peas, beans, corn, parsnips, turnips, carrots, etc., with whole wheat bread and fresh greens.

"If in season lettuce, spinach and celery are invaluable adjuncts to the diet."
"Fruit is preferable to pastry or pudding as a dessert."
"For the evening meal fruit alone is most effective unless the patient be engaged in hard work, in which case the noonday list, with appropriate variation, may be used."
"An evening meal of an orange or two with apples, figs, dates, raisins and fruit salad or nut salad well masticated is most satisfactory. The whole wheat or bran muffin may be added."
Dr. Bell declares that with this list of foods the silly objection of insufficient caloric value is without foundation, and asserts that in his own practice such a diet is always followed with excellent results.
"The albuminous or protein content may be well maintained by increasing the beans, peas, corn, and whole grains."
"The only possible objection to be made against such a diet on sentimental grounds only is the lack of stimulation suffered from abstinence from animal food."
"Liberate meat eaters sometimes complain of being starved, but the impression is largely mental, for they neither lose in weight nor strength, and, on the contrary, make actual gains which, on short time appear for themselves."
Dr. Bell's experience, published for the good of humanity, was considered of such importance that it received comment in the Journal of the American Association.
Any sufferer from the trouble indicated can establish the value of the Bell formula in two weeks time, all the scientific objections to the contrary.

A company of Janesville Home Coming boosters struck Orfordville at about eight forty-five last evening and for a little while entertained a fair sized crowd and extended a cordial invitation for all to attend the Fair and Home Coming. The band by which they were accompanied rendered several excellent selections, and the vocalist was heartily endorsed, to which he graciously responded. The speech was a combination of facts and frivolity and greatly amused the hearers.
As a means of disposing of your real estate, the little want ads are sure winners.

CAMPAIGN METHODS.

The seasoned observer of political battles can remember methods of conducting political campaigns that would seem very archaic in this fall election.

The most typical feature of the campaigns of thirty years ago was the torch light procession. A small town might get up such a parade bigger than its entire population. It had a well drilled company, it could attract detachments from miles around, on the understanding that it was to send its company for a return engagement.

Some terribly long marching jaunts were taken. If a loyal party member and contributor was not rewarded by having the boys march past his house in their flaming glory, he might get sore on the ticket. The marchers cheerfully tramped over the whole town for the reward of doughnuts and coffee and the general romp of the thing.

Not the slightest appeal to public intelligence was made by this form of campaigning. If the parade wound up with a rally, as often occurred, the speaking was mostly funny stories. These could be applied equally well to the other side by changing the name. Yet these parades made votes. The side that produced the longest line and the most skillful marchers gave an impression as winners.

It is a fellow who drilled and paraded with the Republicans, he voted Republican not merely that year but for several years, and similarly with the Democrats. The political managers understood perfectly how to use these associations for political value.

That these parades have so largely been given up is due to common sense. It was a foolish expenditure. People became unwilling to burn up money for something that added nothing to education, gave no information about issues, and turned out no more intelligent voters. Today the newspapers are the real political educators, and campaign funds spent in print go furthest.

DEMOCRATIC HANDICAP.
Some of the Democratic leaders are coming emphatically to the opinion that the initial advantage in this campaign lies with the Republican party.

The most capable Democratic statistician can figure no more than two hundred and two votes in the Electoral college which by any possibility, near or remote, can be claimed for Wilson. While the same Democratic lead pencil sets down two hundred and forty-eight electoral votes as reasonably certain for Hughes, a majority of the Electoral college is two hundred and sixtysix votes. According to these Democratic figures, therefore, Wilson must win sixty-four votes from states which the Democrats class as doubtful, whereas Hughes needs only eighteen from the same source.

The four states which the Democrats look upon as doubtful and wherein they purpose to concentrate their heavy fighting during this campaign are New York, with forty-five electoral votes; Indiana with fifteen; New Jersey with fourteen; and Connecticut with seven. To elect Wilson, under these conditions, requires that he carry three of these states—and one of the three must be New York—whereas Hughes can win by carrying New York alone, or by carrying any combination of two out of the other three.

In studying the problem, the figures of the two preceding presidential elections are most interesting. New York in 1908 gave Taft 870,000 votes, Bryan getting 667,000. In 1912 Wilson had 655,000, and the combined Taft and Roosevelt strength was 845,000.

In 1908 Indiana was carried by Taft against Bryan by 348,000 to 238,000. In 1912 the Hoosier Democrats gave Wilson 281,000 votes to 313,000 polled for Taft and Roosevelt together.

New Jersey gave Bryan, in 1908, 182,000; and to Taft 255,000. Four years later Wilson received home support of 178,000, while Taft and Roosevelt together had 234,000.

Connecticut in 1908 was carried by Taft to the tune of 112,000 to 68,000. In 1912 Wilson got 74,000 Nutmeg voters on his side, while Taft and Roosevelt counted up 102,000.

In other words, in the four states which Democratic south-sayers count as "doubtful," there is only one—Connecticut—where Wilson received more votes in 1912 than Bryan had in 1908; and in not one of these four states was the combined Taft and Roosevelt vote of 1912 as great as that which Taft received alone in 1908.

That is to say, united Republicanism was thousands of votes stronger in 1908 than the total vote of divided Republicanism in 1912; while Wilson was not as good a vote-getter as Bryan showed himself. To put it exactly as the figures show, Wilson was 67,000 weaker than Bryan, while there were 101,000 more men who voted for Taft in 1908 than voted for Taft and Roosevelt together in 1912.

These 101,000 Republicans who were disgusted with the internal party warfare of 1912 and who refused to vote at all, will be called to the polls this year by the reunion of the Republican elements. Thus, in the four states which Democrats admit to be doubtful, Mr. Wilson has the 67,000 votes which constitute the Bryan excess of 1908 as compared with the Wilson vote of 1912, and at the same time he must overcome the Republican reserve of 101,000 which is disclosed by the figures of the two elections. His handicap, therefore, is 168,000 in the race for the eighty-one electoral votes which these four "doubtful" states will have to give.

He can never overcome that handicap.

REALLY AMUSING.

It is really amusing to witness the efforts on the part of the ultra progressives to induce the voters of the state to elect a legislature that will enact their experimental laws to the detriment of the idea of saving state money. In Beloit this element has brought a candidate for the assembly against Albert Winnegar, who made such an excellent record in the assembly last year. This same candidate served one term in the assembly, ran for renomination two years ago and was ignominiously defeated, tried to be a progressive delegate to the Republican National convention and was again defeated and now pops up as a candidate for the assembly again.

content with having induced this perpetual office seeker to make the race against a true and tried legislator, the same elements also are moving heaven and earth to bring out a candidate against State Senator L. E. Cunningham whom they have read out of the progressive ranks, just as the Bishop in olden days used to read out of the church persons who disagreed with them will bell and boo. However, it is safe to say that the voters of Rock county will be wise enough not to be blinded by this effort on the part of a few disgruntled politicians to defeat good and tried servants in the public work for dreamers and men seeking office for revenge only.

Cunningham and Winnegar the interests of the lower half of Rock county are well looked after. Visiting takes care of the upper end of the county and with these three men returned to Madison there will be a nucleus for the conservative Republicans to rally around so that the best interests of the tax payers be conserved.

PREPAREDNESS.

This word preparedness has been preached during the past few months from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. What does it mean? It certainly does not mean war but it means being ready for any emergency. Today Janesville boasts of being the location of a military company of no mean proportion. It is a fellow who enlisted them to see the spirit that induced them to sign their names to the muster roll. The members of the National Guard of Wisconsin are mustered in for this year, subject to the call of the governor, the president of the United States or the president of the United States must drill once a week, they must do their turn at state camp, be drilled men, equipped and ready for any emergency that they may be called upon to meet. It is no child's play, it is men's work, and the young men who joined the company, who will join in the future, understand that it means preparedness. It is not a warlike move. It is a peaceful move. It teaches the members of the company independence, self reliance, how to walk, to march, to conduct themselves in trying situations. The drills are essential to good health and are not tiresome. The men are given plenty of opportunity for social recreation, for meeting and mingling with their fellows. The army is to be the club room, not the street corners, where the young men of today are to prepare the young men of tomorrow for the future. Not to train them to war but to train them to look out for themselves and look out for others. There should be no mistaken idea as to the Janesville Military unit. The parents of the men enlisted, the business men, the professional men, the men who have members in their employ, should give their hearty support to the movement. First the company should be equipped with financial support they need. The state cares for most of this but there are small items that are missed that would go to make up the comfort and convenience of the company. The state equips members, furnishes them with arms and munitions, pays a portion of their armory rental, but it should be the pride of the citizens now that a company of the state guard is here to take local pride in their existence by supporting them. Many cities in the state where they have National guard units have furnished them with armories, built at public subscription. Many like Beloit, furnished them with sums of money for their company fund when they were ordered south. They take local pride in the organization and support them. It is hoped Janesville will not prove an exception when the time comes for seeing material aid for the company of young men who have banded together at request of the governor for the general welfare of the state and the nation. In times past Janesville has shown its patriotism. There are lots of men with wooden legs, with one arm, with ailments that never will be cured, who can tell what they did in the days of the Sixties. There are younger men who went out in the days of Ninety Eight and come back with scars of the malice and fever that racked the camp inmates from end to end. In days gone by Janesville had two crack companies of guards. One of the members of a former company of the state militia today is Brigadier General of the Wisconsin Brigade at the Mexican border, General Richardson. The city has a reputation to sustain and when the time comes, if it does not forget the past.

The principal characteristic of the dancing at the summer resorts this year is that you can get through a figure without having to perform algebraic and geometrical calculations in your head.

There is a growing feeling among the Guardsmen at the border that they could learn to hit a painted target just as well in the back lots of their own home towns.

It is believed that after the Capitol at Washington and all the departments are blown up, our government will arise in its wrath and issue a note of protest.

The people who are away on summer vacations now have plenty of leisure in which to meditate on how uncomfortable the weather is.

Lack of confidence is reported from Wall street, but nothing is said about any lack of confidence men.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

CONTENTED.
I'm glad I'm not in politics;
Nobody heaves the festive bricks
At me.

I go where I want to go,
Nobody seems to want to know
I say whatever I may like—
That's what I do, so help me Mike.

And no one seems to give a hang,
Nobody seems to care a dang
Until it reads the other way.
My past life is an open book.

But no one takes the time to look
And see what they can find;
I am not held up to rebuke;
I can make good or I can lunk.

Just as I have a mind,
I've got a job that is immense,
I am not bothered with expense
Upon election day.

Folks do not yell, "I know him
When"—
I am a private citizen.
I have the job that pays.

THE FAMILY PICNIC

There are other ways of finding trouble than by being president of Mexico, believe your Uncle Dudley, who knows. One of the best ways, by getting up a family picnic. We got one up this year. We were the victors of the occasion.

Never again. It was an experiment in the first place. We wanted to see how many of the relatives would speak to one another. We found out.

The next time we want to spend a pleasant day, we are going to go and hunt up some nice quiet boiler shop where the hammering is not so loud as it is at a family picnic. If we can't find a boiler shop, we are going to hunt up a nice choir are going American revolution and a Central field they don't shoot anything at you but bullets.

Relatives who don't like one another are always nasty nice. That's the way our picnic started. Another that they all so nice to one and a cloud above didn't act natural and a woman's tongue appeared on the horizon before the way out it was the made such the storm and everybody that they made it a point of being polite to one another. It absolutely refused to give.

Every branch of our more or less illustrious family brought its own lunch basket and ate out of it, drawing itself away from all of the other branches of the family. Thus when we sat down to dinner our family was scattered until it covered fifteen acres of ground.

The relatives who were remembered in grandfather's will went to picnic grounds in their 30-candle oiler, seven passenger, Jabberwock out on the street car. One of the two factyldest dreams imagine these a good getting together and having the said time at a picnic?

cided to build a two-foot partition in their house.

Personally, a pleasant time was had. We pulled nine kids out of the river, sat down in a custard pie, accumulated a large population of water which the relatives didn't care to drink for fear it was poisoned.

By five o'clock in the afternoon every member in the party bated us with an undying antagonism for having organized the picnic.

Never again. We are going to bury these clothes and forget the incident, if we can.

Relatives will happen in the best of families, but at you meet them in a social way, it is your own fault.

The Daily Novelette

HE WHO LAUGHS FIRST.

"You're all the world to me," he cried, But in an icy tone,
The stately Boston girl replied;
"I'll be your Frigid Zone."

Young Monsieur Francois Brut, although at that time every son counted himself a dandy, had married the beautiful Lisette Duffez only three months before and now was disproving the proverb that two can live as cheaply as one, bought himself an expensive white derby hat, and, exclaiming, if you will listen, you shall hear how it came about.

Francis, between hearty bursts of laughter, was telling Lisette, at breakfast, how their mutual friend Henri Kissagen had come in for a fine new hat which it cost him a sou.

"It was in this manner, my petite potpourri," explained Francis, "that Henri went in Mouchoir's hat store with three other men who also wanted hats. He said, 'Well, old Mouchoir, you are one great joker, ha, ha, offered a fine white derby free to any man in the crowd who could truthfully say he had kissed no woman but his own wife since he was married. Henri cried immediately, 'I, monsieur, I win the hat!'

"So? When were you married?" asked the incredulous Mouchoir. "Last night," answers Henri. "Ha ha ha! I know my angel, carie blanche, because I was there. Ha ha ha!"

"Then explain, Francois, I pray," said Lisette, with dangerous sweetness, "how it came that you too did not win a white hat?"

"Er—I did, my demi tasse, I did!" cried the impetuous Francois with well simulated gaiety. "It will be delivered today."

And the poor wretch had to give away two weeks' pocket money for an elegant white hat that morning.

JEFFRIS DISCUSSES TORRENS SYSTEM OF LAND REGISTRATION

Has Advantage of Less Expense in Long Run and Greater Simplicity. He Tells Wisconsin Bankers.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Aug. 9.—That the present system of land registration known as the American Title system, has its disadvantages, but that all these disadvantages could not be corrected by the adoption of the so-called Torrens system now in vogue in several communities, was the conclusion drawn in a paper presented by Malcolm G. Jeffris, republican candidate for United States senator, before the Wisconsin Bankers' association in session here today.

Mr. Jeffris said that the present system was more to present the facts about the present systems. He reviewed both systems in analytical detail.

Compare Two Systems.

"I offer this paper more as a basis from which to start the study of the merits of the two systems and as a limited review of what has already been accomplished," said Mr. Jeffris, "that we might be able to take up the subject and work out a system tending towards simplicity and at the same time preserving stability. Before the details of operation are undertaken we should pass upon the question of its general desirability and it is with this view that I have submitted this imperfect outline of the questions involved."

Mr. Jeffris' paper traced the title system from the recording of instruments under common law transactions through the defects of the present American system and then took up in detail the limited adoption of the Torrens system, showing its advantages and its defects.

"What has already been said in describing the two systems shows too clearly for further comment that the Torrens system has the advantage over the present system in the matter of rapidity," continued Mr. Jeffris. "The certificate of title operates as a portable evidence of the exact condition of the title, so that the details of a transaction may be arranged anywhere and at any time. The transaction can be completed within a few hours after its details have been arranged. Real property becomes a quick asset, under this system. The certificate of title is as readily available as a certificate of stock."

Less Expense Eventually. "Respecting the expense, it must be admitted that the Torrens registration is about as expensive as an actual deed to remove a cloud from the title. Yet it should be remembered that a large number of actions of this kind are now brought without the advantage of a Torrens registration. But after the initial registration the expense upon subsequent transactions is but nominal. The register always shows at a glance the condition of the title to date in such a manner that any intelligent layman can readily understand it without legal advice. If a lawyer is needed, his labor will be short and simple as to add but a small fee to the expense. All fees for examining abstracts are saved and they are considerable. In Rock county there were 2,806 conveyances in the year 1915. Supposing only two-thirds of them involved the examination of abstracts—and all of them should—the aggregate expense of these examinations would mean a great saving. In the long run the Torrens system is much less expensive and in general, at least, and perhaps oftener, the property owner of the county would have ended the benefits.

It seems to conclude that while neither system is perfect, the Torrens system has advantages over our present system sufficient to enlist thoughtful men in the consideration of the question whether it is advisable to take steps towards the adoption of that system in this state. I am aware of the fact that such a movement will be opposed by many lawyers who owe a share of their income to the examining of abstracts and conveyances; by abstractors everywhere and by trust and title companies and others who from business reasons will want the system not obtained to remain. But it seems to me the matter should be viewed from the standpoint of the community at large, and when so viewed the Torrens system is well worth our interest.

Need Simpler System.

"None of the systems now in operation can meet my views as to what should be attained if a change is to be made. The simplification of real estate transfers is doubtless desirable and probably a plan could be worked out in detail which would attain this result."

"It might be undesirable to make the system compulsory as to all land, but make it compulsory as to all lands that shall pass through the probate courts, which in the course of a generation would result in putting practically all lands under the new system."

Case must be exercised, however, in changing any system of laws that has been in fairly successful operation for a period of three hundred years. The stability and stability of institutions are evidence of the soundness of the mental processes of a people. Civilization and our institutions should ordinarily develop by gradual growth for the better.

SOCIALIST LABOR UNIONS REDUCED HALF SINCE WAR

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Berlin, Aug. 9.—The membership of the Socialist labor unions of Berlin has been reduced more than half as a result of the war. On January 1, 1914, there were 301,986 members, and the number had fallen to 144,259 on January 1, 1916, a decline of fifty-five per cent. The six months since elapsed figures are not obtainable, but it is probable that further calls to the colors have left not more than 40 per cent of the members at home.

The membership totals given include, however, a large number of female members, so that the decrease of men members was considerably greater than the percentages indicate.

The number of unemployed has declined steadily. Money support has been granted on January 1, 1916, to 2,487. The greatest decreases in unemployment were in the case of book printers, woodworkers, and metalworkers.

The influence of the war on the unions' treasury is shown by the fact that, while there was a decrease of nearly five and a quarter million marks in receipts, the treasury balance increased some 330,000 marks in 1915 over 1914. This was, of course, due to the reduced calls made on the treasury.

SCOTCH CRIMINALS DECREASE; TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT CAUSE

London, Aug. 9.—The report on prisons in Scotland for 1915, just issued, reveals a remarkable decrease in the number of criminals dealt with, the lowest since 1869, notwithstanding the fact that the population of the country has increased since then by 45 per cent. The decrease is attributed chiefly to the growth of the temperance movement, increased facilities for finding employment, and the recent mobilization.

The number of criminals sentenced in 1915 was 27,340, a decrease of 16,155 as compared with the total of the preceding year.

MAJOR RUGGLES WAS JANESVILLE VISTOR

Former Janesville Resident Who is in Coast Artillery Pays Friends Flying Visit.

Major James A. Ruggles, U. S. A., of the coast artillery, was a Janesville visitor Tuesday, the guest of his uncle, John Comstock, for a few hours. Major Ruggles is stationed at Fort Snodgrass, near New York, and was en route back to his post from the Mexican border, where he had been, having taken an eastern brigade to the camps the government has established there. Major Ruggles is a former Janesville resident and in 1895 joined the Rockford Rifles and went to the Spanish American war. Becoming associated with army life, he took the examination at Ft. Leavenworth and was commissioned second lieutenant at the end of his term of enlistment. His promotion has been rapid and he expects to return to Janesville later and make a more extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Thiele of Whitewater were guests of Prof. W. T. Thiele today.

BIG DISPLAY MADE BY PUBLIC SCHOOLS

RURAL AND CITY SCHOOL CHILDREN SEND IN SAMPLES OF THEIR HANDIWORK.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TENT

Rock County Sunday School Association Has Exhibit Which Attracts Attention—Playground and Rest Room Provided.

By Mrs. Abbie Helms.

The crop of which Rock county is most proud, is that of its children and they certainly made a fine showing in their offering of handiwork which they brought to the fair. It has been a new experiment to interest the rural schools in this work, but encouraged by the County Superintendent, O. D. Antisdel, about twenty schools have entered material for the competition and it makes a very creditable display. Samples of patching, hemming, darning and cross stitching, showing the practical work attempted through school training, while drawing, coloring and map making give a chance for artistic possibilities. A collection of bird houses and a doll house with paper furniture are very interesting additions, while vegetables and cooking products are also entered for prizes. Miss Clepp is in charge of this exhibit.

A very large showing is made of the work in the city schools under the supervision of Prof. Allen B. West. His special charge during the summer has been the school gardens and in spite of the adverse weather conditions very satisfactory results have been attained. He is very proud of the showing of samples of rope splicing, hitches, knots, etc., done by the boys in their regular training department. Especially praiseworthy, many kinds of crocheted tables, chests, boxes and other articles being shown and all executed in a tasteful manner. Mrs. Halverson is in charge of a pleasing exhibit of drawing, map work, etc., done by the children of the grades.

A very extensive showing of the work in the domestic science department of the high school is in place. Tasteful gowns, hats and samples of fine needlework are included in the collection and the whole exhibit reflects credit on the young people. Interesting to the young people of the community may be mentioned the exhibit made by the public library which shows how they are working to inform the public in the worth while topics of the present day.

Another unique exhibit, which is of special interest to Sunday School workers is the tastefully decorated tent arranged to show the work of the Sunday School as a social organization. Here are cards, banners and Sunday school literature and pamphlets of all kinds. The mission work, cradle roll and all manner of religious work are represented by their special booklets. Rock county received the banner at the recent state convention as having the highest points in the Sunday School work of the state. Mr. Finn of Beloit is superintendent of this association in Rock county and supervised the making of this exhibit. Mrs. Olson of this city is in charge.

An innovation in the plan of taking care of kiddies during the fair time is offered by the management in the playground and sand pile arranged for their use by the fair management. Here under the supervision of Miss Buckmaster they can be happy and comfortable while their parents take in the big show.

The rest room tent is cool and comfortable and furnished with chairs and cushions for the weary. It is under the supervision of Mrs. W. C. There is an ice box installed here, which will prove a great convenience in keeping cool the baby's milk and in taking care of other perishables. Adequate drinking fountains have been placed in various convenient situations on the fair grounds and every item for public comfort seems to have been planned by the fair management.

In this connection it may be well to mention the very excellent meals furnished by the United Brethren Church society. Mr. Thiele's excellent exposition of domestic science, where pastry is all home made and the bountiful meals are cooked entirely by home talent. No one will make a mistake in thinking to take their meals at the fairgrounds.

EVANSVILLE POLICE

ARREST SNEAK THIEF

Man Captured for Stealing Grip Before Owner Knew it Was Missing.

Evansville, Wis., Aug. 9.—A man who gave his name as Charles Hamilton, believed to be a professional sneak thief, was taken into custody by Evansville police on Tuesday for the theft of a leather grip from a Madison hotel. The thief was arrested by the owner of the grip, C. S. Bray, at Madison, where he was being sold to a physician's supply company. Hamilton was taken to Madison last yesterday, where he was arraigned on a charge of larceny.

Attention of the local police was called to Hamilton when he attempted to dispose of the grip at the hitch barn. He was taken to the station and examined. A tag of the Madison Traveling Men's association was found on the grip and with this a clew it was determined that the owner resided in Madison. Several telephone calls resulted in locating Mr. Bray in Madison. He was informed that the thief who had stolen his grip was in custody before he knew of his loss.

The grip contained clothing and personal effects and papers which were of value to the owner. These were found this morning in the weeds near the hitch barn and were turned over to the owner. It was learned that Hamilton had taken the grip from the lobby of a Madison hotel, after he had rolled it in a rug belonging to the hotel. He sold the rug to an Evansville woman residing on the west side.

Eighteen expert musicians, members of the Delavan City Band, gave a delightful concert on the down-town streets this morning and serenaded the Gazette office. The band is one of the best that has been heard in Janesville for many years and the music they gave was up to date and snappy, just the kind to make the blood tingle and want to hear some more. They played later at the grounds, giving admirable satisfaction.

CHILDREN'S DAY WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

FORMAL OPENING OF JANESVILLE FAIR APPROVED BY YOUNGER GENERATION.

YOUNGSTERS PLEASED

Plenty of Excitement—Lots of Amusement—Good Music—Interesting Races and Wonderful Exhibits.

Tuesday marked the formal official opening of the Janesville fair for 1916. Incidentally it was children's day as well and thousands of youngsters enjoyed the privilege of attending as guests of the directors and viewing first hand all the wonders that they had heard about, dreamed about and thought about for months past. It was a gala occasion and nothing was left undone to make the small guests have the time of their lives.

First there was Beloit's famous Boys' band of forty-five pieces and first of playing all sorts of music to the delight of the audience on raised stands inside the tracks opposite the grandstand and the Ois and the Ahs showed their appreciation of the efforts of the management to give the visitors something new and the young people showed wonderful appreciation of the management to give the visitors something new and the young people showed wonderful appreciation of the management to give the visitors something new.

The bare back riding was as good as seen under any circus top and the specialties equally attractive. Future fairgoers will have a chance to see as much as did the youngsters today.

But the crowning feature of the day's enjoyment was the pony race for the young people. James H. Haxfield, riding a little black pony showed wonderful skill in piloting his mount under equine first with Robert Morton, second and Kenneth Dillon, third and close third. It was not a runaway race for young Haxfield and he had to keep the pony in the limit to win.

The Midway came in for its share of attention and the shows were all enjoyed, the hawkers wares admired and tested and the visitors showed their appreciation of everything they could see and it was all worth looking at.

Not were the younger generation the most interested visitors. Hundreds of fond parents went along to see it was all right and mothers spent hours in the women's display rooms while the fathers and the older people looked on with interest.

One noted dairy expert remarked that he had not visited a fair in years since such an exhibit of dairy cattle was shown and more were still coming in.

There were but two races scheduled for the afternoon but they were well attended. Starter Magnus Flaws at Janesville, Wis., gave the signal of that may be expected of his class during the rest of the meeting when the starter's flag.

Marshall Wiley of Chicago was expert in handling the truck and his work brought forth praise from horsemen and public alike.

The result of the races was as follows:

Park Association Stake.
Lula Harvester ..... 1 2 1
Col. Nutmore ..... 2 1 2
Time—2:25 2:30 2:30

Hotel Myers Stake.
(Four Year Olds).
Mildred Worthy ..... 1 2 1
L. E. Hart ..... 2 3 3
Robert M. ..... 3 2 3
Time—2:25 2:30 2:30

The owners of the respective horses are: Charles Putnam, John Nichols and Charles Wild.

SEEN IN THE GRANDSTAND

Henry Talmadge of Beloit.

Mr. Talmadge says he has not seen a harness race of any note in Janesville since he came here.

Attorney Edwin F. Carpenter, who in the old days was owner of two famous trotters, Dan Falmont and "H. H." Both of these horses were winners at Washington Park, Chicago, world's fair year.

James Cutter of Esperanza (Iowa) and Fairfield boy.

E. C. Brewer, owner of Ben H. and Bad Boy, both of whom are high class trotters in the road.

N. B. Robinson of Houston, Texas, also an admirer of the harness horses.

A Thousand Head of Cattle, Horses and Sheep Will Parade in Front of Grandstand at One-Thirty.

WANT 250 BOYS TO HELP LEAD PRIZE LIVESTOCK

Two hundred and fifty boys are wanted by the Janesville fair management to assist in the livestock parade on Friday. Boys who are willing to help lead the prize stock are requested by the prize committee. The parade will start at 12:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. After helping with the parade the boys will be free to enjoy the afternoon's program. Here is a big chance for Janesville youngsters to attend one of the big days of the fair, free of charge.

One of the features of the fair program on Friday will be the livestock parade which is scheduled for one-thirty o'clock sharp. Forming at the barn and stables the parade will lead down the mile track in front of the grandstand to the quarter mile track and a counter march back to the barn and stables. The parade will lead down the mile track in front of the grandstand to the quarter mile track and a counter march back to the barn and stables.

Such a parade of prize stock will be exhibited in this parade, including all the dairy and beef cattle, each breed being led by the prize winners, decked with their blue ribbons. The entire exhibit of the horse and pony departments and a large part of the sheep exhibit will be seen at this parade. The parade will not be seen at any fair in Wisconsin this year, according to the heads of the departments. The money value of the animals which will appear in this procession will approach the $300,000 mark. It is estimated.

In order to carry off the parade with dispatch, the assistance of 250 sturdy boys will be needed, and Secretary Nowlan asks that boys who are willing to donate their services report at 12:30 Friday afternoon at the Milwaukee avenue entrance of the fair to the livestock parade. The boys will be free to enjoy the afternoon's program.

Friday will be the banner day for the livestock section of the fair and the number of cattle, sheep and swine pens during that day is expected to establish a record. All of the ribbons will be in place by Friday morning and stock men will have a chance to inspect the prize winners.

FIVE LOCAL BOYS MAKE RECORD TIME IN LONG TRIP EAST

Take Pleasure Jaunt to New York City and Back and Have Big Variety of Experiences.

Louis McCarthy, Louis Brown, Earl Fuzell, Kendall Newman and Francis Connors returned Sunday evening after an automobile tour of twenty-eight hundred miles in a period of fifteen days through the east. William McDonald ran onto the party at Coney Island and made the return trip.

Perhaps the biggest experience they had during a week ago Sunday, when the big explosion of stored munitions on Black Tom Island, New Jersey, let go and threw the entire party into their beds in a New York City hotel.

They spent three days in New York City, and during this time, window glass, broken by the force of the explosion many miles away, and strewn over the streets, gave them many a scare. Blowouts were common on the trip and gave the most trouble, aside from the stripping of the cars in front of the Washington monument at Washington, D. C., which delayed them.

Fine roads and great speed limits in the east, Mr. Connors said, was the cause of so many blowouts. At some place they made as many as 305 and 308 miles per day, their schedule before leaving being made out to cover at least 300 miles in each day's run.

At Sing Sing prison they met Warden Osborn a few days after he had been reinstated to this post after sensational charges had removed him from the prison wardship. A special permit from Mr. Osborn got them into the famous electrical execution chamber. Several of the prisoners, chair, and when their companions unexpectedly strapped them in they seemed white as sheets and nearly fainted.

They were at Baltimore when the Deutschland left on the return trip to Germany. Mr. Connors was acquainted with the captain of the big Hamburg-American line liner Vaterland, and with the skipper's permission they spent several hours on what is perhaps the finest passenger ship afloat. It is interned at New York during the war.

At the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City they called on Ezra Bingham, chief of the hospitality, a former resident of the city of Janesville and a relative of Ezra and Edward Bingham.

NEW FARM LOAN BODY IN ACTION SHORTLY

RECENT COMMISSION ARRANGED FOR BY CONGRESS AT PRES-ENT GETTING READY FOR ITS WORK.

FAVORS THE FARMER

Board Is To The Farmer As the National Reserve Banks Are to the Ordinary Business Man.

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Aug. 9.—After many years of investigation and debate to develop the best method of providing financial aid for the farmer at normal interest rates and on long time, Congress has passed a Farm Loan Act. President Wilson has named members of the Board which will administer its provisions, and the work of organizing the vast new system is about to begin.

Secretary McAdoo, ex-officio member of the Farm Loan board, which will be at the head of the system, predicts that it cannot be in operation for at least six months and probably longer cannot be made before next spring.

In operation the system to some extent will do for the farmer what the Federal Reserve system does for the business man. The farmer will be given opportunity to secure money on his most available commodity, his land, and the Federal Reserve bank will be able to make loans on the basis of the Federal Reserve system to have his paper, based on commercial transactions, find a ready market.

The new scheme has many points of resemblance to the Federal Reserve system but in many essentials it is entirely different. In no way will the Federal Reserve system be a commercial banking, and while it is possible that in years to come they may have funds to loan that will amount to several hundred million dollars, it is not believed probable that the Federal Reserve system will have the resources of the Reserve system.

The Act provides for a division of continental United States into twenty land bank districts. The work of designating these districts and selecting the centers at which the loan banks are to be located will be the first important duty of the Farm Loan board and is expected to result in just as many bitter contests as preceded the announcement of the lines of the Federal Reserve system. The location of the Federal Reserve banks. The only directory provision in the Farm Loan Act says that land banks shall be located with particular reference to the farm loan needs of the country, so the board will have wide discretion. Many applications from cities, particularly in the north-west and southwest, already have been filed by the treasury but the board will not make public its conclusions until it has traveled over the country and held hearings in many states.

Must Have $750. Each Federal Land bank must have a minimum subscribed capital of $750 before it can start business. If within thirty days after books are opened for subscriptions to the stock of any of these bank individuals or corporations have not subscribed that amount the secretary of the treasury is directed to subscribe for the United States in the needed sums. Stock in the banks may pay dividends when earned, but the United States stockholder cannot participate with others.

The banks will not, except in special cases, loan direct to farmers, but through the agency of National Farm associations which may be organized to any number in land bank district by any ten owners or prospective owners of farm land who desire to secure loans on farm property. Applications for charter for these associations must go up to the Farm Loan board and may be refused by it. No association will be chartered unless it is shown that signing members desire loans totaling at least $20,000.

In applying for membership in an association, a farmer must take five per cent of the face value of the desired loan in stock of the association.

Will Pass On Loans. Applications for loans are to be passed upon by a loan committee of the farm loan association. Loans will be made only on first mortgages on farm property and the value of the land will be the main consideration. The land will be subject to inspection by an appraiser of the Farm Loan board. Loans will be made only for purchase of land, for its improvement, or for purchase of live stock, equipment, fertilizers, or to provide buildings on a farm or to liquidate indebtedness, existing when the first association is formed in the country where land is located. No loan will be made of more than $10,000 nor less than $100. Interest will not be charged greater than five per cent.

The loan itself will be reduced through an amortization plan providing for reduction by annual or semi-annual payments on the principal. No mortgage shall run for more than forty years nor less than five, and there are the necessary provisions in the law for satisfaction of overdue interest and amortization payments.

The money to be loaned will come through the Federal Land Banks passed to the hands of the National Farm Loan associations and to the banks will not give them much loaning power so Congress increased that power greatly by authorizing the banks to issue Farm Loan bonds and to sell them on the open market. The Act provides that when a Federal Land bank has loaned $50,000 to farmers it may issue a corresponding amount of Farm Loan bonds, and that any one bank on a minimum capital of $750,000, is to be twenty times that capital. This would give each bank $15,000,000 and the whole system $150,000,000 to loan on first mortgages.

Five Per Cent Stock. Farm Loan bonds are to be made attractive by payment of not more than five per cent interest and a provision that they shall be exempt from federal, state or municipal taxation. They are made legal investments for trust funds. They are not to be obligations of the United States, but will have the same priority as first mortgages on farm lands. These mortgages are also exempt from taxation.

In case local conditions do not favor organization of farm loan associations and banks cannot be authorized by the Farm Loan board to make loans to farmers through agents it approves, such as banks, trust or mortgage companies, and the law permits establishment of joint stock land banks to loan directly to farmers on first mortgages of farm lands. These banks will be under supervision of the Farm Loan board, but will not be assisted by Federal Land Bank funds as will loan associations. The stock banks, however, which are to be capitalized at not less than $250,000 each, also may issue farm loan bonds, exempt from taxation and based on first mortgage securities, their capital of fifteen times their capital stock. These banks are subject to the same provision of the law as loan associations, in respect to interest rates, amortization, etc.

Governed by Board. In the beginning the Federal Land banks will be governed by directors appointed by the Farm Loan board, but after subscriptions from loan associations to any Federal Land bank's capital stock, reach $100,000, an election system will become effective, with the directors chosen by the Board and six by the loan associations. The Board will approve compensation paid directors and officers of these banks. The loan associations will be directed by unpaid officers except a secretary and treasurer, or secretary-treasurer.

Banks and loan associations will be subject to the customary examination by persons appointed by the Farm Loan board and the law provides penalties for infringements of its provisions or counterfeiting of Farm Loan bonds.

WISCONSIN NEEDS PERMANENT ROADS BANKERS ARE TOLD

F. A. Cannon of Good Roads Association Lays Bare the Waste in State's Highway Building.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison Wis., Aug. 9.—"If the loss incurred over a period of ten years, say, less than ten years, caused by the lack of permanent roads in Wisconsin were put into the building of good roads, we could construct 5,000 miles of hard surface highways covering a part of the state of Wisconsin. Good roads would be an investment for the people of this state and not an expenditure. I propose to adduce some figures in support of this statement and feel they will be convincing."

With this opening remark, F. A. Cannon, executive secretary of the Good Roads Association of Wisconsin, spoke to the bankers at the Wisconsin State Bankers' convention in the assembly today, and they got out their pencils and began to follow the figures.

Need for Better Roads. The speaker first presented data on the dairy tonnage of the state. Based on information received from the dairy and food department, he figured the tonnage to and from the cheese factories and creameries and the condenseries as 1,716,000 tons, consisting of milk, whey, cream and butter. Three quarters of this, he estimated, must be hauled from the creameries and cheese factories, because of their location, to the market station, adding 1,287,000 tons to the above, making a total of 3,003,000 tons.

On information from the agricultural department, he computed the tonnage of thirteen leading farm products at 11,004,807 tons. Adding to this other farm products and tonnage in and out to the big cities, he figured the total farm tonnage approximately 20,000,000 tons.

Based on reports from manufacturers, he figured a loss from consumption of gasoline, destruction of tires, and general deterioration of 25 per cent automobile caused by bad roads each year applied to 100,000 automobiles in the state. On horse tonnage, he used government estimates of a loss of ten cents per ton per mile on an average haul of six miles.

With the slogan, "Wisconsin, the Playground of the Middle West," he declared hundreds of thousands of tourists would be attracted to Wisconsin by good roads, and that they would start a movement on the part of the people of Wisconsin to "See Wisconsin First."

To solve the problem, he believed that legislation should be devised providing for the laying out of a wide system of trunk lines by the State Highway Commission, and the gradual building of those trunk lines by giving additional state aid to each county for the construction of its unit of the trunk line. He praised the present law, but called attention to the fact that while 4,000 miles of road had been built, it was in 3,000 pieces, less than two miles in each piece.

NEWS NOTES from MIDDLELAND

by DAISY DEAN

Volia Smith, winner of a dozen popular contests conducted by leading magazines and newspapers was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1888. From earliest childhood this captivating little actress felt sure that she could succeed on the stage. After being graduated from high school she took a three years' course in dramatic art. The family had moved to New York, and right across the street her company began to build its new studios. When production of pictures began, little Miss Smith used to hang over the garden gate and watch enviously the actresses entering the great building for their day's work. After chance came one morning when D. W. Griffith looked out of a window and saw her. She was just the type the great director needed for a picture. With characteristic impulse he rushed downstairs and across the street, looked the astonished girl in the eye, said "You'll do!" and told her to consider herself engaged. From that time on she has advanced swiftly from ingenu roles to such important parts as "Lorna Doone." The secret of her popularity lies not alone in her beauty and striking personality, but also in her genuine ability to portray emotion.

When D. W. Griffith's play, "The Birth of a Nation," was shown at the Drury Lane theater, London, not long ago at a special matinee for the benefit of the war workers fund, royalty attended. Queen Mary with Queen Alexandra and Princesses Victoria and Mary and the Princesses Henry and George were there.

King Baggot and his company are in Savannah doing a number of scenes for a five-reel production, "Half a Loaf is Better Than No Bread," by Harold MacGrath.

AT THE BEVERLY TONIGHT.

Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance."

The third chapter of "Gloria's Romance" with Billie Burke in the stellar role, will be presented at the Beverly tonight. This chapter is entitled "A Perilous Love." A complete synopsis of the preceding chapters will be posted on the stage.

"Passers By," one of the best known leading men on the American English stage, will make his stellar appearance on the screen at the Beverly Theatre tonight in the new Equitable five part picture, "Passers By." This artistic and charming picture is the work of C. Haddon Chase, who also wrote the novel and play of the same name.

The story of "Passers By" deals with a young bachelor who lives in solitude and contemplates upon his shattered romance of some years before. He has been separated from the woman he loves through treachery and deceit. How the lovers are reunited through the benevolent intervention of a London fog, forms the charming and absorbing climax to a series of scenes of real dramatic power.

AT THE BEVERLY THURSDAY.

Kathlyn Williams in "The Valiants of Virginia."

Kathlyn Williams, known to all lovers of motion pictures, enacts what is perhaps the strongest character role of her noteworthy career in "The Valiants of Virginia," the Selig Seal Play to be shown on Thursday at the Beverly Theatre. As Shirley Dandridge, Miss Williams seizes the opportunities offered to present a charming character study in which she rises to the topmost heights of realistic emotionalism. Her acting will appeal to everyone. Her part is that of a southern girl, ignorant of the past history of the Valiants of Virginia. She gives John Valiant, last of his race, her heart and hand. Later, torn between loyalty to her mother and love for Valiant, she resolves to sacrifice her love. How all the problems are finally solved and all wrongs righted are not the least interesting action in "The Valiants of Virginia."

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am twenty years old and have been going with a young man of the same age for two years. I haven't kept steady with him, but have gone on and off with him very often during this time. I have never seen him with another girl and I don't believe he goes with other girls. I am known to everyone we know as his girl friend.

The only fault I can find with this young man is that he is a little bit of a flirt. This reason I know he is a flirt is because the instant I introduce him to my friends, he generally takes a great fancy to them. He generally gives me his undivided attention, but while these friends are present he pays hardly any attention to me. His attention to these other girls takes place right in my presence. However, these flirts do not last and he comes back to me as ardent as ever. Long intervals often intervene during which time I do not see him after he takes these flirts.

Like the boy very much, in fact better than anyone else I have ever known. When he acts like this I feel very badly and I lose interest in everything. Do you think my youth is to blame and he will come to this fault? Would you advise me to keep or break this friendship?

You ought to be sure the end of the friendship that the boy likes you. Since you and he have been friends for two years you can hardly call him a flake. Don't let jealousy catch him. If he begins to think that you object to his taking an interest in other girls and feel that you have a claim on him, he may drop you. Boys cannot stand restraint.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Three years ago while at a picnic I had my picture taken in an extremely undignified pose with two boys. I had made. Recently I became acquainted with the finest young man I ever met, one with high principles and morals. He happened to come upon this old picture he was thoroughly disgusted. He has not been to see me since. What can I do?

By showing in every way that you are above that sort of thing you young man may come to realize that the picture was merely a foolish little mistake on your part and is no true index to your real character. I am glad that you have decided for yourself that you did a very foolish thing.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young married woman of twenty-three. For the first year my husband was very devoted to me; in fact until baby came he spends most of his evenings out. What can I do to keep him at home? Don't do it. Be as agreeable to him as you can, make your self look as attractive as possible, but do not act as if his presence is needed to make you happy. Have some time in evenings and read or amuse your self in some way. But be sure to keep your house a neat place. Do not let the baby take this important place. Remember your husband to your husband; you cannot blame him for going out if you are neglectful of his happiness.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been keeping steady company with a boy for three months and I like him very much. My birthday was a few days ago and he gave me a pretty ring. My friends say that I cannot keep it. It will hurt his feelings very much if I return it. What will I do?

Return the ring and tell the boy that you do not want it. He will accept it. She is a girl who should not accept jewelry from a boy unless she is engaged to him.

Household Hints

SOUTHERN CHICKEN RECIPES.

To Pot Roast Chicken—Clean, pick and cut up one stewing chicken the same as for frying. Take a generous piece of butter and all chicken fat obtainable; place in iron vessel (if possible) and heat very hot. Have chicken well wiped, add to hot fat, browning quickly all over (take great care not to burn); have one large onion chopped fine, add to chicken and brown well. Lower the fire and allow to simmer slowly in own liquid. When dry, add one cup hot water, and cook until tender. Just before serving add as much water as you desire for gravy and when boiling fast shake flour in but do not stir; add a generous portion of flour so gravy will thicken well. Cover tight for five minutes.

Chicken and Macaroni—Boil chicken until tender, remove and cool; take all bones out and pick to pieces. Now boil half pound macaroni until tender (break into small pieces). Butter a deep baking dish, put a layer of coked macaroni on bottom, then a layer of minced chicken, bits of butter, salt and pepper, then some liquid the chicken came out of. Pour this until dish is filled. Pour over all one cup cream and bake one-half hour at 350°.

Creole Chicken—Boil a large chicken until tender, in enough water to cover without cutting the chicken up from running out. Remove from fire and add to the chicken water half can tomatoes, some minced parsley, two chopped red sweet peppers, two small onions, salt and pepper. Steep down good water. Now make a stuffing of mashed potatoes, moistened with this gravy; stuff chicken and brown in quick oven. Serve with what is left of the Creole gravy.

THE TABLE.

New Kind of Fruit Cake—One egg, one cup sugar, four tablespoons melted butter or fat, one cup sugar, four tablespoons melted butter or fat, one cup fruit (stewed or raw according to the kind used), half teaspoon soda dissolved in a little water and stirred into the fruit, one spoon baking powder. Bake in two layers. Ice and nut together with a little fruit stirred thick with confectioner's sugar. Almost any kind of fruit can be used.

Baked Peach Dumplings—Sift four cups flour and one teaspoon baking powder, add one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon shortening; mix together, add water enough to mix dough; roll out and cut in squares. Slice peaches, put in with sugar, pinch lightly together to keep juice from running out when baked. Can be eaten with milk or cream. Bake in morning and will be ready for supper. These are nice when going out in afternoon and don't want to get much supper.

Bohemian Peach Dumplings (boiled)—Take four cups of flour and one teaspoon salt; sift, add one egg, beat in flour, add water to mix dough in squares. Put each sheet peach and sugar, then pinch tightly together so they don't break open. Bake in salt water twenty minutes. When done, take out and cut in half. Take two tablespoons butter, melt, put peach dumplings in this. Very good. This takes the place of meat and potatoes. You can use plums instead of peaches. When plums used, grate ginger cake and sprinkle over them; or cream cheese is good.

Fruit Gingerbread—One-half cup butter, one cup brown sugar, two eggs, one cup molasses, three cups flour, 3/4 teaspoon ginger, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup seeded raisins, one-third cup candied orange, one-half cup citron and orange candied, one-half cup milk. Beat butter and sugar till light and creamy, add beaten yolks of the eggs, then raisins, currants, candied orange and citron (chop last two fine); add the molasses also; stir with ginger and baking powder. Sift the two eggs beaten to a white with a fork, well-greased pans in moderate oven until a clean straw from a broom can pass through cake without sticking. Remove from oven then and cover (after taking from pan) with a cloth.

Flannel Straining Bag—Cut a square of flannel, fold it diagonally through the center and sew up one side with a short, strong stitch. Before using dip in hot water and wring out lightly.

Poor Man's Delight Cake—One cup sugar, one cup flour, one cup scalded milk, whites of two eggs, three teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt. Sift dry ingredients together four times. Do not grease pans.

Nature's Punishment Sure.—Sickness is punishment for breaking one of nature's laws, and ignorance of the law is no excuse. Nature is kind, but she knows no pity for ignorance—unless we are willing to pay years of penance for a day's negligence.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question—I read in a newspaper where a congressman found a remedy for indigestion, constipation, etc., in the shape of fine sand, wrote him at once but got no answer. He met a man who said he had learned from an old woman to use sand for this purpose—sand from a certain spring, supposed to be good for a cure of a congressman's, but I advise you to leave it alone.

Answer—Maybe the congressman hadn't the sand to answer. The last time I knew of a discovered the remedial value of sand, took a teaspoonful once or twice a day, felt fine for a time, then died with cancer of the bowels. Sand may be excellent for a chicken's digestion, but for a goat's or a congressman's, but I advise you to leave it alone.

USE COLORS TO TRAIN YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Cleveland, Aug. 9.—If your little girl tells a fib or hops the ice wagon, buy her a pale blue pinafore. If your small boy disobeys and has to be sent to bed, buy him a blue bed-room papered a sky blue. If you want to do some hard mental concentration hang a yellow curtain across the window.

"Clear red makes folks affectionate and dark red makes them emotional," Dr. Grumbine stated. "White makes folk feel spiritual and pure. Every color has its effect on the human mind."

"Blue is the color that will help the child go the right road."

Destiny Rules. That each thing, both in small and in great, fulfill the task which destiny hath set down.—Hippocrates.

The Summer "Life Savers" are fruit, cereals and green vegetables. Meat in Summer overtaxes the liver and kidneys, while potatoes cause intestinal fermentation. Get away from the heavy diet and give Nature a chance. One or two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, served with milk or cream or fresh fruit, make a deliciously nourishing, satisfying meal. Such a diet means good digestion, good health and plenty of strength for the day's work. All the goodness of the wheat in a digestible form. Serve it for breakfast with milk or cream; eat it for luncheon with fresh fruits. Made at Niagara Falls, N.Y.

"None have more pride than those who dream that they have none. You may labor against vain glory until you conceive that you are humble, and the fond conceit of your humility will prove to be pride in full bloom."—Spurgeon.

What are you the most conceited about? Someone plumped that question in silence in one of our afternoon chats on the subject of the evening and the resulting conversation was most interesting.

Try it some time. If you can get people to be honest you will get some worthwhile sidelights of character. People are seldom proud of the things they have the most obvious reason to be pleased with.

The Strange Things People Are

The brainy man or woman frequently takes less pride in his mental ability than in some minor accomplishment or perhaps some single physical beauty.

Do you remember, in "Little Women," how Jo, the clever member of the family (and presumably the plainest), wept bitterly the night her mother was called to her sick father's bedside, and when his sister, assuming that she was worried about him, tried to comfort her, she confessed that it was really because she was so proud of her beauty that she was so grieved?

That little woman touch was one of the many that make that wonderful book so real and so beloved.

In which the Butterfly Shows That She is No Longer a Butterfly at All. As the train slowed down at Fairport, Elsie Gordon stepped off and giving her check for her suitcase to the driver of the dingy bus hurried away toward her home.

"I do wish Ralph's mother was not there," he should so enjoy seeing Ralph all alone and telling him what I have in my heart to say," she thought as she climbed the hill leading to the house. Nell Morton saw her approaching. But wisely kept in the background. Ethel tried the door and with a radiant face took her hat and key from her handbag and let herself in.

"I hope she has come back a woman," thought Nell, dropping the curtain and returning to her work.

"I am alone to work out this thing to suit myself," Ethel hugged herself with delight. "I'll look and see what there is in the house to eat. It is 10 o'clock," she added, glancing at the timepiece on the mantle as she hurried to the pantry. She found the place well stocked with provisions and in perfect order. Her face flushed as she remembered what confusion her mother-in-law must have found when she came.

Everything was going nicely in the kitchen at a quarter of twelve.

"I hate to have him know before he gets here, but it would be so unbearable not to have him know before he gets here, risk." She hurried to the telephone. When Ralph came to the phone and she heard his voice she trembled with excitement.

"Is that you, Ralph?" she asked. "Come home to dinner, dear. I am back home." As soon as she heard his delighted "Ethel!" she hung up the receiver and hurried to the kitchen to put the finishing touches to the dinner, keeping an eye fixed on the path by which her husband would come.

"I'll not take off my apron when I go to meet him, for it will be a sign of the change in me, a change that he will welcome, poor boy."

She was at the door to meet him as he bounded up the steps and he caught the radiant little creature in his arms, and all he had never known a more blissful moment in his life than came over him when he felt the utter surrender of the little creature in his arms. After a few minutes of eloquent silence she took his face between her hands and said as she kissed him:

"I must go and finish my dinner. Cooks cannot long be spared from the kitchen or their dinners come to grief. She threw a kiss to him from the door before she vanished from sight. Ralph prepared for dinner with a heart beating high with hope.

"Could such fortune come to a man as to have a wife as beautiful as she and at the same time one who can keep house and make a man comfortable?"

The dinner was beautifully cooked, but Ralph hardly knew what he was eating so absorbed was he in watching the little wife. She removed the plates and crumbed the cloth with grace. But when she came near his chair he interrupted all operations by drawing her face down to be kissed. And her joy in his happiness—well, it was perfect.

HERE'S WHY HER CLOTHES COST TWENTY-ONE BUCKS A YARD MATERIAL

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Here's why her clothes cost so much. This fall she asks for long full skirts on her party gowns and dresses and insists that $21 a yard material be used.

It takes four yards and "up" to make a skirt of this kind, or $84 worth for "just the dress gods," which doesn't make the waist nor put on the trimmings.

That's why some women's dresses cost around $250.

This deduction was brought out today when Chicago dress manufacturers made their display at the fall show of Chicago-made garments at Bismarck gardens.

Dress manufacturers vied with each other to display the most costly material in their dresses. Buyers agreed that all had succeeded.

The war has made costly materials more costly, say manufacturers, because these kinds come from imported goods demands a good price, middle west buyers discovered today.

Navy blue is the prevailing color in dresses for fall, although black, purple, and wine colors are also favorites.

The waist is cut yoke effect with a collar at the back.

POISONOUS AND HARMLESS SNAKES

As this is the season for the woods and fields let us consider the snakes. Besides the rattler there are only three varieties of snakes capable of poisoning victims of their bites in the United States. They are all easily recognized.

The coral snake is found only in a restricted area in the southern states and is distinguished by its brilliant markings.

The water moccasin and the copperhead are both "pit vipers," that is, they have a characteristic pit or depression on the head, between the eye and the nostril, which is shaped like a triangle. The water moccasin has a massive muscular development of the jaw.

Venomous snakes are thicker in proportion to their length than harmless snakes and their fangs are rougher. The pupil of the eye is elliptical, like a cat's, instead of round as in the ordinary blacksnake. The blacksnake should not be killed, because it is an enemy and destroyer of venomous snakes and vermin. The common water snake, erroneously called "water moccasins," is equally harmless and useful to man; it is not a genuine moccasin, but a harmless snake. The puff adder is another harmless variety.

The forked tongue of a snake has nothing to do with its poisonous character. The sting or bite is of course made with the fangs or long teeth in the upper jaw. Though the fang is small, it carries the venom from the venom sac or gland at the root of the fang. The force of the strike squirts the venom from the sac into the tissues of the victim, a veritable hypodermic injection.

Symptoms following snake-bite are much the same from all three poisonous varieties named. Slight pain is felt at first, but the pain gradually increases until it becomes very severe after a few hours. The tissues surrounding the wound become swollen and discolored with extravasated blood under the skin. At this time the breathing becomes labored, the heart action grows weak and irregular, cold sweats, faintness, nausea and collapse follow. If the patient survives for some hours, delirium, coma, and other general disorganization may come on, or more commonly, recovery ensues slowly.

The most vicious delusion is that whiskey carried on snakebites. Whiskey given in heroic doses contributes to more fatalities than snake bites do.

The proper treatment is immediate sucking of the wound, free incision to encourage bleeding, or even cutting out the tissue for an inch around the fang marks. Immediate application of a caustic, or a red hot iron is the next best remedy. The application and if possible the injection of a hypodermic of the wound of a five per cent solution of potassium permanganate in water is a good remedy to destroy the poison. The application of ammonia is likewise useful. The internal administration of adrenalin solution, in doses of five to twenty drops, every hour or two, is one of the best remedies; this powerful agent is more effective when injected directly into the veins. As a general stimulant, strychnine sulphate may be given, 1-100 grain every three hours to an adult. Serum therapy is not yet established upon a practicable basis, though it has great possibilities.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

A Congressman's Answer. Question—I read in a newspaper where a congressman found a remedy for indigestion, constipation, etc., in the shape of fine sand, wrote him at once but got no answer. He met a man who said he had learned from an old woman to use sand for this purpose—sand from a certain spring, supposed to be good for a cure of a congressman's, but I advise you to leave it alone.

Answer—Maybe the congressman hadn't the sand to answer. The last time I knew of a discovered the remedial value of sand, took a teaspoonful once or twice a day, felt fine for a time, then died with cancer of the bowels. Sand may be excellent for a chicken's digestion, but for a goat's or a congressman's, but I advise you to leave it alone.

"Mrs. Knight spoke reprovingly. 'Don't be silly, dear. You know we did it all for you. But we're not complaining.' Mrs. Knight put added feeling into her words. 'We don't want you to live the way we've had to live; we want you to be rich and to have things. After all we've done; after all poor Peter has suffered—'

"Don't!" cried the girl, falteringly. "I think of him every hour."

"He isn't the sort that complains. I consider it very thoughtless of you to behave as you do and make it harder for us." Mrs. Knight sniffed and wiped her eyes, whereupon Lorelei went to her and hid her face upon her mother's shoulder.

"I don't want to be unkind," she murmured, "but sometimes I'm sick with disgust, and then again I'm frightened. All the men I meet are beasts. That whole party was sordid and mean—old men drinking with girls and pawing them over. Mr. Merkle was the only nice one there." The mother was dismayed to feel her daughter shiver.

"Good Lord! You people make me sick," cried Jim, rising and making for his room. "Anybody'd think you'd been insulted."

When he had gone Mrs. Knight asked, accusingly: "Lorelei, are you in love?"

"No, why?"

"You've said some queer things lately. You're worried me. I hope you'll never be tempted to do anything so foolish. I don't intend to let you make a mess of things by marrying some chorus man. When the right person comes along you'll accept him, then you'll never have to worry again. But you must be careful."

"Do you think I'd be happy with a man like Mr. Wharton?"

"Why not? You'd at least be rich, and if rich people can't be happy, who can? If you accepted some poor boy he'd probably turn out to be a drunkard and a loafer, just like Wharton is now." She sighed. "I'd like to see you settled; we could take Peter to a specialist, and maybe he could be cured. We could go abroad and get the help of those German surgeons. I've always wanted to travel."

"What Are You Two Planning?" inquired Lorelei.

When Lorelei reached the theater that evening she found Lila Lynn entertaining a caller who had been more than once in her thoughts during the day. Miss Lynn's visitor was a well-dressed man who gave a first impression of extreme physical neatness. He was immaculate in attire, his skin was fine, his color fresh; a pair of small, imperturbable eyes were set in a smiling face beneath a prematurely gray head. Max Melcher was a figure on Broadway; he had the entree to all the smart doors; he frequented the popular cafes, where he surrounded himself with men. Always affable, usually at leisure, invariably obnoxious, he had many friends.

At Lorelei's entrance he smiled and nodded without rising, then continued his earnest conversation with Miss Lynn. None of their words were audible to the last comer until Melcher rose to leave; then Lila bailed him with a nervous laugh, saying:

"Remember, if it doesn't go, it's a joke, and I run to cover."

"It will go," he told her, quietly, as he strolled out.

"What are you two planning?" inquired Lorelei.

"Nothing. Max drops in regularly; he used to be sweet on me," Lila completed her make-up, then fidgeted nervously. "Geel!" she presently exclaimed, "I'm tired of this business. We're fools to stay in it. Think of Atlantic City on a night like this, or the mountains. This heat has completely unstrung me." She rummaged through the confusion on her table, then inquired of the dresser, "Croft, where are my white gloves?"

"They haven't come back from the cleaner's," Mrs. Croft answered.

"Not back? Then you didn't send them when I told you. You're getting altogether shiftless, Croft. When I tell you to do a thing I want it done."

"I hope I drop dead if—"

"I hope you do," snapped the indignant girl. "I told you to attend to them; now I've nothing but soiled ones."

The dresser began to weep silently. She was a small, timid old woman, upon whose manifest need of employment Lorelei had taken pity some time before. Her forgetfulness had long been a trial to both her employers.

"That's right; turn on the flood-gates," mocked Lila. "You stop that sniveling or I'll give you something to cry for. I'm nervous enough tonight without having you in hysterics. Remember, if it ever happens again you'll go—and you'll take something with you to think about." Seizing the cleanest pair of gloves at hand, she flung out of the room in a fine fury.

"You won't let her fire me? I need work, I do," quavered Mrs. Croft.

"Now, now. Don't mind her temper. You know Lila is excitable."

"Excitable?" Croft wiped red eyes with a corner of her apron. "Is that what you call it? I'll be glad if her millionaire takes her out of the business, like she thinks he will. Poor man! He's laying up trouble for himself, that he is. She'll land him in the divorce court—with her flash-light photographs."

Lorelei swung around from her mirror. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, I heard her and that Jew—that Maxey Melcher. They've got a photographer and witnesses. Your brother is one of 'em."

"Jim? What?"

"It's true. It's a bad crowd Mister Jim's in with. And there's something big in the air. Millions it is. And her saying she'll box my ears. The hussy! I've heard 'em talking before tonight."

"Tell me everything, Croft—quickly."

"I have. Only you better warn your brother—"

The assistant stage manager thrust his head through the curtains, shouting: "Your cue, Miss Knight. What the devil!"

With a gasp, Lorelei leaped to her feet and fled from the room.

CHAPTER VI.

Lorelei did not secure another word alone with the dresser until the middle of the second act, by which time Mrs. Croft was her own colorless, work-worn self once more.

"I don't know no more than I told you," she informed Lorelei. "Mr. Melcher has been coming here for a long time, and he always talks about Mr. Hammon. I've heard enough to know that him and her is after his money—millions of it. Mister Jim can tell you everything—" Mrs. Croft broke off her narrative suddenly, and Miss Lynn herself burst into the room, panting from a swift run up the stairs.

"Quick, Croft! Don't be all thumbs now." She tossed a sealed letter upon her table, rapidly unhooked her dress, stepped out of it, and then seated herself, extending her feet for a change of slippers. She took the moment to open and read her note.

Lorelei looked up from her sewing at a little cry of rage from Lila. Miss Lynn had torn the message into bits and flung it from her; her eyes were blazing.

"The idiot!" she cried, furiously, rising so abruptly as almost to upset Mrs. Croft.

"What is it?"

"I—must telephone—quick! I must; or—Lorelei, dear, will you do me a favor? Run down to the door and telephone for me? I won't be off again till the curtain, and that will be too late." Lorelei rose obediently. "That's a dear. Call Tony the Barber's place—I've forgotten the number—anyhow, you can find it, and ask for Max. Tell him it's off; he can't come."

"No, can't come? Max?"

"No. Just say, 'Lila sends word that it's off; he can't come.' He'll understand. There's my cue now. I'll do as much for you." Lila was off with a rush, and Lorelei hastened after her, speculating vaguely as to the cause of all this anxiety. As Lorelei hurried down the passageway a man in evening dress turned, and she recognized Robert Wharton.

"You are sent from heaven!" he cried, at sight of her. "I enter out of the night and unburden my heart to this argus-eyed watchman, and lo! you come flying in answer to my wish. Quick service, Judge. In appreciation of your telepathy I present you with some lumbago cure." He tossed a bank note to Regan, who snatched it eagerly on the fly.

Lorelei forestalled further words. "Please—I must telephone. I go on in a minute."

"Fairly Princess, last night I was a goldfish; tonight I am an enchanted lover."

"Wait! I'm in a hurry." She thumbed the telephone book swiftly in search of her number, but young Wharton was not to be silenced.

"Tell him it's all off," he commanded. "You can't go; I won't let you. Promise." He laid a hand upon the telephone and eyed her gravely.

"Don't be silly. I'm telephoning for someone else."

"That's exactly what we can't permit. The 'someone else' is here—I'm it."

"I slapped you last night; I promise to do it again," Lorelei told him, sharply.

"Something whispered that you did, and all day long I have been angry; but tonight I come with another purpose. Outside is a chariot with ninety horses—French racing—champing at the bit. We are going away from here."

"You're drunk again, Mr. Wharton?" He glanced at the clock over Regan's head and shook his head in negation. "It's only ten-twenty. In two hours from now—"

"Give me that 'phone."

"Promise to tell him it's all off."

She smiled. "All right. I'll use those very words."

Wharton hesitated. "I trust you." "I'm going to tell him he can't come," she said, holding out her hand. Once the instrument was hers she meditated the book with nervous finger, staring doubtfully at the cause of her delay. Wharton, as on the evening before, carried his intoxication with an air. He was steady on his feet, immaculate in dress, punctilious in demeanor; only his roving, reckless eye betrayed his unnatural exhilaration.

The Judge had enjoyed the scene. He chuckled; he clicked his loose front teeth like castanets. Bob turned at the sound and regarded him with benignant interest, his attention riveted upon the old man's dental infirmity.

"You're quite a comedian," Regan wheezed.

"Click 'em again," said Bob, pleasantly. "Wonderful! Age has its compensations. Play 'Home, Sweet Home' when you get 'em tuned up. Or perhaps they are for sale?"

Lorelei scoured her number and was surprised to recognize her brother's voice. She made herself known, to Jim's equal amazement, and then inquired:

"Is Max there?"

"Sure. He's outside in the automobile."

"Call him, please."

"What do you want of him? How'd you know I was here?"

"Never mind. Call him quickly."

At last Melcher's voice came over the wire, and Lorelei recited the message. There was a moment of silence, then she explained how she came to be talking instead of Lila.

He thanked her, and she heard him muttering as he hung up. She turned to find her annoyance nodding with satisfaction.

"Splendid! I thank you; my father thanks you; my family thanks you. Now where would you like to dine?"

"How can a person get rid of you?" she inquired stiffly.

"I'm sure I don't know—it isn't being done. But I'll try to think. Wear your prettiest gown, won't you? for I intend to engrave all the other fellows."

She turned with a shrug of mingled annoyance and amusement, and he called after her:

"The Judge's teeth will entertain me till you come. I'll be waiting."

Miss Lynn, as she dressed after the performance, was still in an evil temper; but she thanked her roommate for aiding her; then, as if some explanation were due, she added, "That note was from Jarvis."

"You puzzle me, Lila," Lorelei told her, slowly. "I don't think you care for him at all."

Lila laughed. "Why do you think that? I adore him, but we had an engagement—and he broke it. Men are all selfish; the bigger they are the more selfish they become. They never do anything you don't make them."

"He can't sacrifice his business for you."

"Sacrifice! It's women who sacrifice themselves. Don't suppose any of those men we met last night would sacrifice himself for anything or anybody? Not much. They are the strong and the mighty. They got rich through robbery, and they're in the habit of taking whatever they want. They made their money out of the blood and suffering of thousands of poor people. That's what it is—blood money!"

Reason for It.

As the government entomologist sees it, there is no reason why people should not eat bugs, like the birds. The chief reason seems to be that they are not near enough to actual starvation to be out of their senses.—Kansas City Journal.

Saints of the Bath.

I would not say a word in depreciation of modern plumbing. Beyond a doubt it is one of our greatest blessings, and the herald of a true democracy, when there shall be neither a "great unwashed" nor a "submerged tenth." But, somehow, Saturday has lost its savor. Life is tamer than it used to be. No man in his senses would wish, in this day of Pullman sleepers, to cross the Great Plains in a prairie schooner, but the names of the men who risked their lives to do it are enshrined in history. And so I think we ought to build a little altar to the middle-class country mothers who, in the face of every obstacle, kept the Saturday-night bath a sacred institution, and handed it down to their children inviolate.—Atlantic.

Peril in Cleanliness.

With sobs in his voice, the applicant for a meal and some old clothes had told his story, and the kind-hearted woman had helped him.

Now he sat eating a hunk of bread and cheese and she thought it wise to get in a little good advice. So she began:

"Don't you think that—er—it would be better for yourself if you used soap and water occasionally?"

The tramp sighed dolefully.

"I would, ma'am—I would," he answered eagerly, "but the truth is that there's so many different kinds of soap, and it's so hard to know which is injurious to the skin, that I'm afraid to take any risks."

BOSTON GAINS GAME; TROUNCES WHITE SOX

Red Hose, But Half a Game Behind Chicago, Win Yesterday, 6-4, After Hard Hitting.

Wickedly hitting three of four pitchers pitted against them and playing the bases to safety in the extreme, Boston beat the White Sox yesterday, 6 to 4. The victory advanced them a full game and today the teams are but half a game apart, the Rowlands in the lead.

Cleveland stepped a couple notches closer yesterday, as did Detroit, and the twin victory of the Browns over Washington has made St. Louis a real agitator in the nervous first division agitation.

Of half a dozen hits the Sox drew four runs which was considerable more commendable than that of the world's champions who nursed but six off fifteen hits from three pitchers. Danforth, who hurled the last two innings and the fourth man to be used by Rowland being the only one to hold them hitless.

Faber started the hostilities, but was tumbled in the fifth. Williams took his place and lasted while three runs crossed the plate and until one was out in the sixth, when Cicotte was handed the pill. He was replaced by Danforth in the seventh with one run and five hits against him.

Carl Mays was the elevated section in the road that bumped the Sox. In the Sox collection of six bingles were three triples, but on only one occasion did there happen to be a runner on. Scott or Joe Benz was to be Rowland's choice today. Carrigan was expected to pick either Foster or Ruth.

RING OUT THE CHEAP; RING IN QUALITY

I asked a shoe man the other day why it was that shoes were so much higher in price than they used to be.

"Shoe leather has gone up," he said. "Most people think that's the reason. But it's only one reason."

"People are buying better shoes than they used to. They want more comfortable shoes. Better fit. They want longer wear and more style. They want some individuality, too."

I thought to myself: Well here's a condition just like the one we are experiencing in the automobile business.

Nearly every 3400 r. p. m. we have sold this year has been to someone who has driven a lower priced car.

I know for myself that it pays to buy better shoes as well as a better car.

But it seems that the great big buying public has the same idea, too.

I'm particularly strong for the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers because she's got tremendous endurance.

There are now more than 1,000,000 miles of use in owners' hands behind her—and that tells a lot.

Besides the factory writes me that she has a record of service of 99.21 percent perfect.

If you never had a run in her let me know. I want you to get this thrill whether you have any idea of buying or not.

Kenosha Club Player Finishes Elimination Flight Six Under Bogey.

R. P. Cavanagh, Kenosha, the present Wisconsin golf champion, showing in real championship form, with a score of seventy-three, six under bogey, led yesterday in the elimination round of the Badger tourney at the Kenosha Country Club grounds. Cavanagh looks like a winner again as he had a noticeable edge on all of the 120 players who were in the trials with him.

E. P. Ellis, Milwaukee, a former state champion, and James Anderson, of Kenosha, runner up two years ago, were tied for second with seventy-six—three under bogey.

Stanley D. Tallman took the outright in forty-three and returning counted forty-six. Albert Schaller was forty-four out and forty-two in. J. P. Wilcox covered the start in forty-three and the play in forty-eight.

Sport Snap Shots

MORRIS MILLER

Frank Chance is making a hit as manager of the Los Angeles Coast league team. Though the team has had every sort of bum luck, Chance has kept them in good spirits and inspired them to their best, however hopeless things might seem. Whether Frank gets a pennant or not he's sure to be a hit with Los Angeles fans.

Joe Tinker should not favor the passing of hard hitters in tight places to get the next man. At least three times within the past two months or so he's worked this only to have the next batter swing the bat and bring home enough runs to win. In three different games with Brooklyn he lost in this way. Jack Myers was passed by Wheeler Dale and Dale got a hit that meant three runs and the game. A little later Myers was passed to get Coombs, and Coombs got a timely bludge. A week or so later McCarty was passed to bring up Dell and Dell singled, winning the game for the Dodgers.

Frank Gotch seems to be through with the wrestling game forever. The report of his breaking a leg in a recent exhibition bout is correct and Frank says he has wrestled his last. His career has been an interesting one at every point and he worked his way to the championship by plugging right after it. When he finally tumbled to Tom Jenkins aside he had his own way of things. Zbyszko, the pole, was Frank's particular fix and he never actually defeated him. He first took him on foolishly offering to throw him five times inside an hour, but he didn't throw him once. After that Gotch evaded the Pole till finally a match was arranged wherein Frank pulled out a rather slender victory and not a clean-cut one. After that they never met again.

The American Association, my the way, seems to be clearing up this season by selling stars to the big leagues. Just give a look at a partial list. Indianapolis sold Joe Kelly to the Cubs for something between $19,000 and $15,000. They also got a fat sum for Carter. Kansas City is known to have got a king's ransom for Chuck Wortman, the infielder they sent to the Cubs. However much truth there may be in these reports it's pretty likely that all these boys are bringing good money. They are all real stars and have been pursued by several different clubs. Two or three clubs were after Jimmy Middleton of Louisville before McGraw grabbed him and several scouts had their eyes on Floyd Farmer of the same Colonels before he went to the Pirates.

The Indians slugged the offerings of Russell and Love to all corners of the lot and beat the Yankees yesterday 9 to 4. Gould kept New York well in hand until the ninth, when he let them get a couple of runs. Chapman scored on a sacrifice fly, second in the first inning, probably the first time a runner scored on a fly to a second baseman. With the bases allied, Gideon fitted to Gedeon in short right, Gedeon making the catch with his back to the plate.

PAPAL SHIP SAILS SEAS FOR FIRST TIME SINCE POPES LOST HOME AS CAPITOL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Rome, August 9.—For the first time since 1870, when the popes lost Rome, a papal ship today sails the high seas. Because of its initial mission it is called the Nunciata. It was first chartered to carry Mr. Vasallo di Torregrossa from Spain to Argentina. He is the new Apostolic Internuncio to the South American republic.

The Vatican has officially notified the different governments of the existence of the Nunciata. The neutrality of the Holy Sea is respected. It imports were $975,337,421.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, imports and exports to the total of $2,169,000,000 passed through the great American metropolis, while London during the corresponding 1914 calendar year registered a foreign trade of $1,485,607,410.

New York's exports reached, during the period, $1,153,531,000 as against London's $262,653,300.

Britain's first port, however, maintains the import supremacy with a total of $1,222,552,110. New York's imports were $975,337,421.
